Supply Management is Transforming. Is Your Organization Prepared?

Supply management is going through an extensive transformation at an unprecedented pace. As geopolitical uncertainties continue to disrupt global supply chains and technology becomes increasingly complex and digitized, your organization needs to quickly adapt to remain competitive and prepare your supply management team for the future.

To face these challenges not only requires new strategies and technologies, but also having the right talent in place to mitigate risk and create new opportunities. It's clear, job roles are evolving and the skills required are becoming more advanced. The time is now to prepare for the talent shift and start investing in the professional development of your top performing employees because it's one of your biggest competitive advantages. 622% of executives interviewed were NOT confident that their organizations possess the competencies needed to deal with today's supply chain issues.

ISM® Corporate Program

Outcomes Matter. ISM Can Help.

The Corporate Program leverages the ISM Mastery Model® framework — a comprehensive competency model that addresses critical supply management skills. With ISM's Mastery Model® Assessment*, develop a strategic talent roadmap by first identifying where strengths and skill gaps currently exist within your team. Benchmark and evaluate your team's understanding of essential supply management skills against your organizations targeted standard. Once the baseline has been established, leverage ISM's learning resources to provide your team with the tools needed to close identified skills gaps and improve proficiencies.

Professional Development. Corporate Growth.

By offering professional development training to your teams, not only will you drive a culture of continuous learning and personal professional growth, but you will enhance your culture to help attract the new talent needed to drive success for the future.

The Corporate Program is offered in three tiers depending on the size and performance of your organization.
